Jazz festival's youngest performers

By Steve Marschke

A band made up of kids from combined West Sacramento schools will be feature the youngest performers at this year's Sacramento Jazz Festival on Memorial Day weekend.

The band, led by music teacher Curt Pearsall, will play at an Old Sacramento pizza parlor on the Friday evening of the holiday weekend, in which thousands of tourists swarm to Sacramento for the music.

Sixth grader Laura Vasi from Golden State Middle School, a clarinet player, said she was nervous about the performance.

"Some songs we're still really bad at , and I don't know if we're going to learn them in time," she commented.

But Vasi also reported she was excited about the event, and that a lot of hard work has gone into practice.

"We practice for three hours per week," she commented. "I'm supposed to practice every night on my own but sometimes I skip a few days!"

Local school band members: Matt Coe, Igor Dylan, Anthony O'Connor, Laura Vasi, Alex Matthews, Silas Zdybel, Wendy Bohanan, Becky Miller and, Steven Fitzgerald. Not pictured: Sara Penrod.

Matthew Coe, also a GSMS sixth grader, plays trumpet for the band.

"We play 'Peachering Rag,' 'The Entertainer,' 'Shine' and other songs," he said. "I'm pretty nervous because we're the youngest people who are going to be there. In a couple of practices, we'll be ready."

Coe describes instructor Pearsall as "really funny."

"He likes doing this band work, and you really like being around him."

Lingering concerns:

Planned new bridge won't solve road safety worries

■ Traffic on Jefferson Blvd. in Southport may go up even after the new Palamidessi Bridge is constructed

By Steve Marschke

Jefferson Blvd. traffic in Southport may get heavier for several years even after a second bridge is built.

West Sacramento's top planner acknowledged yesterday that the new Palamidessi Bridge, which will provide the city's southern half with a much-needed second access point across the barge canal, will not prevent traffic from increasing along the Jefferson Bridge corridor.

But he added that modifications to the corridor may improve safety even as traffic increases.

The Jefferson Bridge corridor is slated to be widened in the year 2000, in a joint Caltrans/West Sacramento project estimated to cost $24 million.

"There may be a point when the traffic levels are higher before then," said Stephen Patek, West Sacramento's community development director. "But the streets, per se, are not at capacity."

Patek said that traffic signals, added lanes for turning and merging, and other measures may improve the carrying capacity of the street before it is widened. Another option being considered is the resurfacing of the two-lane Jefferson Blvd. bridge, which is made of a metal grating usually slick in damp weather.

According to city estimates, 15 percent of Southport traffic heads west on Stone Blvd after crossing the bridge. If the new Palamidessi Bridge is finished by late 1996, the same people plus an additional 15 percent of the traffic are expected to use it as a detour around the Jefferson Bridge, heading to jobs in the city's western half or to other points.

> I'm committed to making it safer, or else we have to look at (the solutions) a whole different way.
> Councilman Wes Beers

But as soon as the bridge opens for business, construction will be allowed in Southport, adding to the region's current 6,000-or-so population. So the result could be a net gain in traffic across the Jefferson Bridge, even with the alternative crossing, and even if the city's estimates are accurate.

"In the first year after the bridge is constructed (probably 1997), we're estimating that 250 new houses will be built. In the second year, 400, and in the third year, 600," said Patek.

If the dwellings house an average of 2.5 people, that means Southport's population could increase by 50 percent before the widening of Jefferson begins. And the Jefferson project has already faced delays as Caltrans and West Sacramento search for adequate funding.

City councilman Wes Beers said the project will probably not be delayed again.

He added that the road must be made safer despite additional traffic which will build during the next few years.

"I'm committed to making it safer, or else we have to look at the (planned solutions) a whole different way," he said. "We will probably add a turn lane onto South River Road and some additional traffic controls. We're hoping to get Caltrans to recognize that we need more than 'just paint the lines and trim the trees.' "

Two three-fatality accidents have occurred on the Jefferson corridor since September; one near Linden Road and one at South River Road.

The planned Palamidessi Bridge will cross Stone Blvd. near Cebrian, and is primarily designed to serve planned industrial development at the Port of Sacramento and Southport Industrial Park.

Jefferson Blvd. is a state highway.

Sacto supervisors vote on Port

By David Weller

The Sacramento County Board of Supervisors last month ordered its staff to begin looking for ways to help finance the deepening of the channel serving the Port of Sacramento.

In a four to one vote, the board agreed that the county would pay as much as two and a half million dollars toward the dredging project if port land is put up as collateral.

Altogether, the four local governmental bodies who own the port need to come up with $10 million to deepen the channel from 35 to 40 feet.

The $10 million will be matched 3 to 1 by a federal grant which will pay an additional $30 million to complete the project, according to Port Commissioner John Sulpizio.

Sacramento County is the first of the local governments to agree to come up will a share of the initial money needed to fix the port. The city of West Sacramento will address the issue at tonight's council meeting. The city of Sacramento and Yolo County expect to consider port funding issues soon.

A joint steering committee made up of staff from the four local governments issued a report in April recommending that the port be either fixed or closed. The sale of port land at discounted rates was considered one of several alternatives.

The committee found that $10 million needs to be invested locally to deepen the channel, and an additional $25 million will be needed to modernize equipment and bring the operation up to date.

Counting the $30 million matching grant the federal government has committed to the dredging project, the total cost of repairing the port is expected to be $65 million.

Sulpizio greeted the show of commitment by Sacramento County with enthusiasm. "They took a very positive step in my opinion," he said.

Sulpizio believes that selling the land in order to get money to dredge the channel would be foolish. "Selling land would be a very unwise stewardship of the

Port looking for ways to dispose of ammonia waste

By David Weller

The Port of Sacramento is looking toward West Sacramento's waste water stream as one possible disposal ground for ammonium nitrate generated from washing its equipment.

The ammonia based fertilizer collects on conveyor belts and other equipment as it is unloaded from ships and bagged for distribution in the central valley. The port receives and distributes about 150,000 tons of fertilizer annually.

In the process of washing down the equipment with water, a dilute fertilizer solution is generated, which is collected and stored in tanks until it can be hauled away by a private contractor. The contractor applies it to the ground in agricultural areas. The solution is from 1 to 2 percent ammonium nitrate, according to Port Commissioner John Sulpizio.

The port has had problems disposing of the ammonia for several months, according to Sulpizio. The state requires the port to collect the ammonia, but until this year has not granted permission to either move the solution off-sight or to apply it to its own grounds.

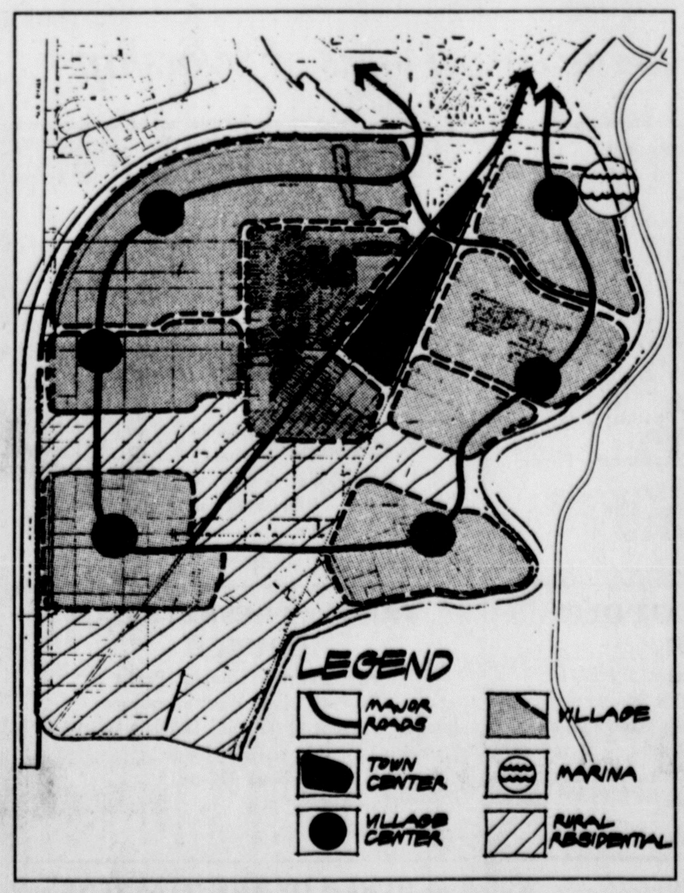

Finally, after collecting a half million gallons of the solution, the port was permitted to hire a contractor to dispose of it.

Since February, the Triad corporation has removed about half the solution from port property and applied it to agricultural lands in the region.

The port pays a fee for removal, in addition to paying rent

Plan is ready:

The Southport Framework Plan -- laying down a master plan for development of West Sacramento's southern half -- comes to the city council tonight for approval.

The plan includes provisions for the Port of Sacramento, the Southport Industrial Park, and six "villages" throughout the 7,000 acre region, bringing a projected final population of 43,000 people to Southport.

Victim identified, reward offered in case of man found dead in local parking lot

By Steve Marschke

A $1,000 reward has been posted for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the killing of 56-year old transient Wayne Harvey Stancil, found dead in an Industrial Blvd. parking lot on May 2.

Stancil's body was found by employees arriving at work, and police believe he was killed the previous day. He was last seen alive with a companion at West Capitol and Poplar on May 1 in the evening. The two were described as intoxicated at the time.

Stancil was a white male, 5' 9" tall, 140 lbs., with red hair and a beard, balding on top. He may have been wearing a "Salem" baseball cap.

Police Lt. Ron Moore said investigators were checking a vehicle for physical evidence of the crime after it was reportedly seen in the area where Stancil's body was found. It is not yet known whether the victim was killed at the site his body was recovered.

Moore asked that the cause of death not be publicized, in order to preserve the investigation.

A good reason why there was no one on sales floor

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I got a telephone call the other day from an old friend of mine (I'll call him Ray) whose voice seemed a little more excited than usual. "You're not going to believe what just happened to me, man," he said with disbelief.

"What?" I asked.

"Have you already written your column for this week?" he asked.

"I wish," I said, suddenly reminded that my deadline to hand it in was only a few days away.

"Well," he said with conviction, "I've got a little story to tell you that I think would make a great column."

"Really?" I said, mindful that although I often get interesting suggestions from other people concerning topics for the column, they rarely lend themselves to this particular 750 word format.

"So, are you ready for this?" asked Ray with his contagious chuckle.

"I'm ready," I said, grabbing my notebook and a pen just in case.

"Okay, how often do you go up to Radio Shack to pick something up?"

"Actually," I admitted, "I try to make a point of avoiding any store that sells a lot of electronic stuff."

"Somehow that doesn't surprise me," said Ray, who is one of the few people I know who has genuine empathy for the little personality quirks of others. "But you've been in the Radio Shack store up on Harbor Boulevard before, haven't you?" he asked.

"Not really," I said.

"You know the one I mean, though, right?"

"Yeah, I think so."

"Well," explained Ray, "that doesn't matter anyway, because one Radio Shack store is pretty much like all the others."

"How so?"

"They all sell the same things and they have these really aggressive sales people who swoop down on you the minute you walk through the door."

"Really?"

"Which brings me to my story," said Ray. "A few hours ago, I went up to Radio Shack to check out some telephones, and just before I went in the door, I reminded myself that the absolute last thing I wanted to do was make eye contact with any of the sales people."

"Why?

"Because that's when they really come after you. Anyway, much to my surprise, when I got in the store, I didn't spot a single sales person, but I still made this really conscious effort to keep my eyes glued to the floor as I shuffled over to the telephone section. Then, after a few minutes, out of the corner of my eye, I kinda saw what I figured was the only customer in the place hurry out the front door. I didn't really pay much attention to him or get a good look at him -- actually it could have been a her for all I know -- but suddenly there I was, all alone in the store, with no customers crowding around in front of me and absolutely no sales people anywhere in sight. It was heaven, man."

"But Ray," I asked, "how am I supposed to get a whole column out of you having a good time up at Radio Shack?"

"Here's the funny part," he said. "Just when I couldn't believe my good luck, this young kid comes hippity-hopping out of the back room, makes his way over to me, and with a very polite voice says, "Sir, excuse me, sir, but could you please untie me?"

"You're kidding?" I said. "You walked in on an armed robbery?"

"Isn't that a kick?" said Ray.

"So what did you do?"

"Well," said Ray matter-of-factly, "I went ahead and untied the poor guy and then he called the police and told them he had been held up by a man with a small caliber gun. Then I waited around until the police had interviewed me and everything, but since I didn't really see anything, I wasn't too much help."

"The guy got away, huh?"

"Yeah, the police said with all the freeways that connect near Harbor Boulevard, they probably wouldn't have much of a chance to catch him."

"I'm sure glad you didn't walk in there a few minutes earlier," I said. "You could have got yourself hurt."

"But don't you think this will make a great column?" said Ray, chuckling again. "It's even got a great little moral to it."

"And what's that?" I asked.

"If Radio Shack wants its customers to be able to help identify the people that rob them, they gotta get their sales people to stop harassing them the minute they walk through the darn door."

Double honor for district

■ Two Washington Unified schools are among only 52 in the U.S. cited for excellence in working with disadvantaged populations

U.S. Education Secretary Richard W. Riley has recognized 52 schools in high-poverty areas across the nation for significantly improving academic achievement, attendance and discipline. Included were two schools in the Washington Unified School District in West Sacramento, Bryte Elementary School and Alyce Norman School.

"These outstanding schools deserve our recognition because they have worked hard to help all of their students learn and succeed -- often overcoming substantial adversity," Riley said.

The schools were singled out for acknowledgement by the U.S. Department of Education's 11th annual Title I National Recognition Program.

This year, the recognition program focused on schoolwide projects which involve boosting the achievement of all students in high-poverty schools, rather than targeting special help only to students identified as educationally disadvantaged.

"Title I is a critical investment," Riley said, "aimed at assuring that no child is denied a real opportunity for education because of the disadvantage that often comes with poverty. And when a school has a number of students entitled to Title I services, it just makes sense to operate the program schoolwide."

The Department changed the focus of Title I (formerly Chapter I) because research indicates that student achievement often fall behind unless special emphasis is placed on raising acadmeic standards, improving teaching and involving parents in high-poverty schools.

Named for an important section in federal elementary and secondary education law, Title I provides funds to local schools to help improve basic and advanced skills of educationally disadvantaged students living in high-poverty areas.

The new Improving America's School Act encourages many more schools to adopt the schoolwide improvement approach. The act lowers the minimum poverty level at which a school can offer a schoolwide program from 75 to 60 percent for 1995-96 and to 50 percent in subsequent years. All of the schools recognized this year had poverty levels above 75 percent.

The award-winning projects have several elements in common: consistent focus on teaching and learning; significant parental and community involvement; comprehensive approach to helping students meet challenging standards; and, ongoing and effective training of teachers and staff.

As part of the selection process, state education agencies nominated projects, and an in-

Hanks: all around athlete

By Chuck Robinson

Justin Hanks, a senior at River City High School, has been a real contributor this year in football and baseball.

Justin has been River City's quarterback for the past two years. In his senior year, Justin set several school records in football. He set one record in pass completions (38) and another in overall yards, with 758 yards and 6 touchdowns. He also set a new school record in rushing yards by a quarterback, with 68 carries for 447 yards and 4 touchdowns, an average of 6.6 yards per game. His longest run from scrimmage was 39 yards.

Justin has been on the varsity baseball squad for two years as well. In his junior year, Justin was a part-time catcher and first-base man; he also had a .278 batting average, 3 doubles,

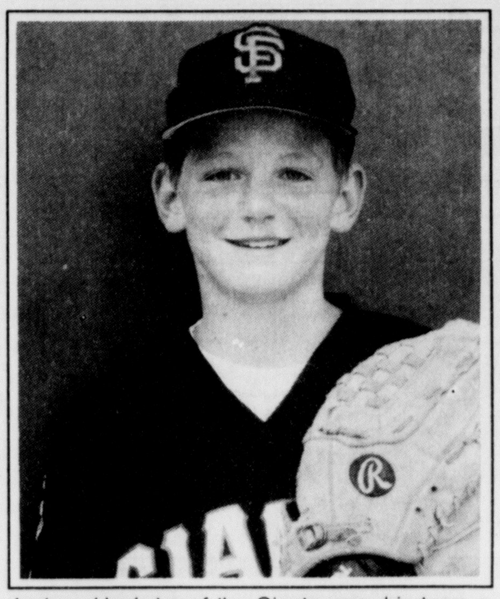

1 triple, and 10 runs batted in.

This year, Justin has been a big part of the backbone on this team, as both catcher and pitcher. He has an arm that throws the ball like a bullet. As catcher, there have only been 4 players to steal second base on him. As pitcher, Justin has five wins and no losses. As hitter, Justin has played in 18 games, with 53 at-bats and 20 hits, an average of .377. He has scored 13 runs, and has stolen 3 bases without being thrown out in three attempts. Justin has 7 doubles, 2 triples, 1 home run and 14 runs batted in.

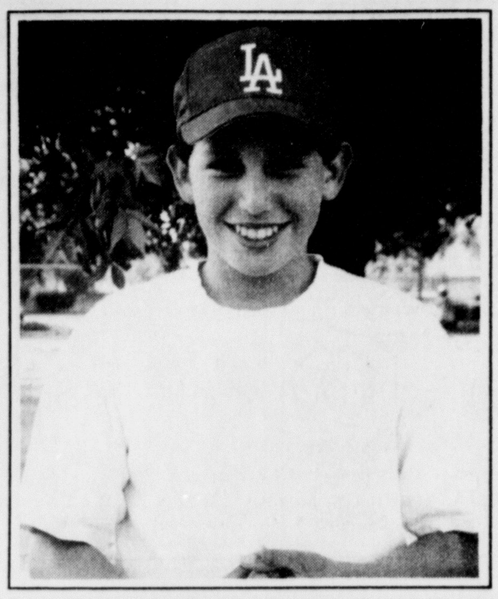

Justin pitched this last Thursday against Golden Sierra and tied a school record in strike-outs in a single game, giving up only 3 hits. He has also been selected as one of two players to play on the Golden Empire League Optimist Baseball Team.

I would like to congratulate Justin for a job well-done; I am proud to be a part of the coaching staff for Justin and know that he will do well in college and be an essential part of their team. Good luck in everything that lies ahead for you in life, Justin.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The Sacramento Kings won 11 more games than last year, so now the fans will pay an average of 14 percent more for season tickets! The increase is around $5 for seats in the lower section.

The cheapest seat in the lower section will increase to $30, and the cheapest seat upstairs to $9. The most expensive seat in the house, "Kings Row," will cost $145.

Just think what the prices would have been if the Kings had made the playoffs.

The second round of the playoffs are heating up and it looks like the Knicks and the Pacers are going to go to seven games. Indiana's Reggie Miller did the impossible in the first game, scoring eight points in the last 14 seconds to beat New York, after the Knicks had started celebrating their six-point lead with 24 seconds left in the game. Miller, who finished the game with 31 points, hit a three-pointer and then stole the inbound pass and returned to the same spot for another try! New York knocked the Pacers out of the playoffs two years in a row, so this year I have to go with the Pacers in seven games.

The Bulls and Magic will be a great series to watch, but any team that has Michael Jordan, Scotty Pippen and Tony Kukoc should win. The Magic are a pretty bad team on the road, so the advantage should be with the Bulls. Bulls in six games!

San Antonio in five games over the Lakers!!

Phoenix will have their hands full with the defending champion Houston Rockets and both teams will need boxing gloves to finish this series, but the home court advantage will allow the Suns to win in seven games.

Speaking of boxing gloves, promoter Don Chargin has 64 rounds of boxing scheduled for the Arco Arena Saturday, May 13 starting at 6:30 p.m.

The "KO at Arco" main event will feature Lennox Lewis and Lionel Butler in a 12 elimination bout with the winner guaranteed a fight with Oliver McCall, who knocked out Lewis for the WBC title. Lewis, second ranked and defeated just once, is an 11-5 favorite over Butler, who is ranked third. Butler is a 27-year old native of New Orleans who has 16 knockout wins in his last 18 fights. These two guys were sparring partners and really do hate each other, so don't miss the first round!!

West Sac's undefeated junior featherweight, Willie Jorrin (10-0), makes his first 10-round debut against Max Maldanado (19-7). Jorrin will be signing fight posters, taking pictures with fans and selling T-shirts on Thursday, May 11, from noon to 1 p.m. at the Radio Shack store at 811 Harbor Blvd. Also, tickets for the "KO at Arco" will be on sale scaled from $22 to $44.

See ya next week!!

Come join the Willie Jorrin Fan Club.

West Sacramento's undefeated junior featherweight Willie Jorrin (10-0), who will weigh in at 124 lbs., will be fighting the first 10-round bout of his young career at the "KO at ARCO" night at Arco Arena, 6 p.m., May 13. Jorrin will fight on the undercard of the Lewis-Butler heavyweight bout against Max Maldanado (19-7) from Tijuana, Mexico.

Willie will be signing free fight posters, taking pictures with fans, and selling T-shirts on Thursday, May 11, from noon to 1 p.m. at the Radio Shack store on Harbor Blvd. Also, fight fans will be able to purchase tickets for the boxing matches with tickets scaled from $22 to $44.

News-Ledger Editorial

Master plan for Southport was worth the cost

The West Sacramento City Council will consider adoption of a master plan for the city's southern half tonight, possibly concluding a four-year planning process.

On the "plus" side, the Southport Framework Plan provides some common-sense organization to what would otherwise be the piecemeal development of the city's 7,000 acre southern half, as it grows from about 6,000 people to a projected 43,000 people (more than doubling the population of West Sacramento as it does so).

The plan contains a land use map which divides Southport into six future "villages," each featuring a core of public facilities and local stores, and each separated from the others by a belt of lower density development and open space. The goal is to keep a small-town community feel, and to provide services locally, while Southport grows beyond small-town status.

This is clearly a good thing. Without the plan, we'd simply be looking at the approval of development projects chunk-by-chunk with no cohesive, long-range plan; no structure for the big picture.

On this respect, the plan deserves about a "B+" grade: well above average, though far short of the kind of world class innovation that might have been possible had West Sacramento's 1991 city council majority broken ranks with the developers and pushed for a design firm more progressive, and more popular with West Sacramento residents, than the one they did hire.

The plan also contains design standards which, while important, fall short of assuring true excellence. They require that all residential sidewalks be screened from streets by a planting strip of greenery, for instance, in order to encourage pedestrian traffic and a "neighborly" feel, much like parts of Land Park.

But the standards are often overly lax, as in the requirements designed to prevent a "garagescape" appearance in the region's new neighborhoods by reducing the amount of the front of new houses which will be made up of garages. This is a good idea, but the new regulations by themselves will not adequately achieve the goal. Up to half of a house's front may still be a garage door and garage. If the garage is set back three feet from the front wall of the house, this percentage rises even higher. And one third of the homes will be exempt from any regulation whatsoever.

The financial questions of the plan remain to be answered. Southport, a virtual island, requires a great deal of infrastructure such as bridges, streets, sewers and other construction to be developed, and paying for this, especially for the first few years, will be a challenge. Time will tell how well the financial implementation part of the Southport Framework Plan has been thought out.

But all in all, the planning project -- which cost over a half-million dollars -- was worth it.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks!

I wish to thank, with all my heart, the people of "Christmas in April", who came to my house to restore its beauty and make repairs where needed. It also restored my faith in people. I'm sick with heart trouble and was just about to give up on looking for tomorrow.

But praise the Lord, my prayers were answered.

Thank you, Bill Kristoff and George Clause with the "Christmas in April" project, and to all of the wonderful people who came along.

The ladies with the House Captain were wonderful to me. They did a wonderful job and gave me lunch.

The men did a beautiful job with the yard, garage and roof. They made me a beautiful garden with lots of flowers.

I got up this morning with work on my mind and happiness in my heart for a new tomorrow.

Thank you, again. God bless all.

Why not softball?

Hi. How are you? I'm fine.

I was wondering why you have the West Sac. little league scores and games they have to play and you don't have Washington Girls Softball League scores and games? The games are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. I hope you take this into consideration.

My team plays on Monday and Wednesday and our colors are blue and white and my number is six. We play at Bryte Park.

Editor's response: A good question, and thanks for asking it.

The folks who cover sports for the News-Ledger, like Chuck Robinson, Richard Novoa and Ray Cushing, are volunteers. Chuck and Ray cover the sports they are involved in as a service to their leagues and the newspaper.

As a small newspaper, the News-Ledger doesn't have the staff to cover other sports, such as your league, regularly. But we'd love to print the results if someone within the league will help keep us up to date!

If you know someone who might be able to do this, please have them call 371-8030. Thanks!

Cahill wronged

A headline in the Bee's National Digest section caught my eye "Father Fired as Daughter Watches." The article described how a man working for Structural Dynamics Research Company was invited to bring in his eight-year-old daughter for the recent "Take Your Daughter to Work Day." That morning he was called into the bosses office and unexpectedly fired. He and his young daughter were then escorted by a security guard from the building. The company spokesman said "the timing of the dismissal was regrettable." Good word, "regrettable."

One of our own little West Sacramento girls had a similar "regrettable" experience several weeks ago. The long delayed Planning Commission meeting where Jim Cahill was forced to make a resignation speech was finally aired on cable T.V. this Monday. It was upsetting to read about this several weeks ago in the newspaper; seeing it on T.V. was downright depressing.

Mr. Cahill's wife and three children were in the front row. At the end of the meeting, Mr. Cahill took the podium (it was easy to imagine Wes Beers standing behind him with his arm twisted into a lockhold) and while his resignation was emotional, he avoided any blame and ended on a high note (with a quotation from Arthur Godfey of all people). Since Mr. Cahill was the victim of politics and his only sin was standing up to the Southport Homeowners Association, I assumed his fellow commissioners would make some gracious remarks about his service and adjourn the meeting.

Instead, with a Hi-dee-ho and don't-let-the-door-hit-you-on-the-way-out, some of the commissioners immediately took up the issue of who would be the new chairman and started jockeying for position. It was like

'Pajama Game' a delight for lovers of Broadway-style musical comedy

The Pajama Game. Presented by the Drama Department of River City High School. Directed by Roy S. Engoron. 8 p.m. May 11, 12, 13. Yolo High School Auditorium.

This well-paced production of one of Broadway's most memorable musicals doesn't seem like a high school play at all. The acting, direction, lighting and music are all on a par with what one is likely to run across these days in the Off-Broadway houses of New York City.

From the opening curtain it is plain to the seasoned theater-goer that every care was taken in staging this whimsical tale of a labor dispute at the Sleep Tite Pajama Company in Anytown, USA.

Take the casting: as Sid the hunky plant supervisor, Brian Kinney projects the earnest integrity necessary to make us root for him as he woos the vivacious and idealistic Babe, head of the union's grievance committee (pleasingly portrayed by Raquel DeLaPaz). Another amusing love match is that of Hines (Eddie Tacdol), the pugnacious plant manager and Gladys (Bethany Monroe), the statuesque secretary to Hasler (Tony Venditti), CEO of Sleep Tite. Tacdol and Monroe play their height disparity to great comedic advantage. As Sid's secretary Mabel, Irene Hernandez reminds the audience of every goodhearted, busybody secretary they ever knew. Similarly, Moses Cushing as the lecherous but lovable Prez, the union head, skirts the edges of parody but never crosses the line into incredulity. Melanie Treichler also turns in a convincing and entertaining Mae, a factory worker.

The score is full of timeless gems that will bring back memories for older listeners.

The pleasures of this production aren't just in the acting. The score, by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross, is full of timeless gems that will bring back memories for older listeners. "Hernando's Hideaway" and "Hey There" are the two biggest hits from the show, but "Seven and a Half Cents," "Once A Year Day" and the show's title song are also eminently hummable. All of the cast members hold their own as singers and the choreography by Laura MacDonald is well-executed by all involved.

The spare sets are highly effective, as are the lighting and sound. All aspects of this show are better than good, especially—and it must be said—for a high school production.

watching a man hit by a car and the by-standers moving in to take his watch and wallet before the ambulance arrived.

People often inadvertently behave in a silly manner when suddenly caught up in an awkward situation but the lighthearted treatment of his plight was embarrassing to watch. I'm sure these commissioners already knew that Wes Beers had flexed his political muscle and Mr. Cahill was on the mat. To behave in such a callous manner in front of a man's family was more than inappropriate.

The camera panned in for a moment on the face of Mr. Cahill's little girl (about age eight or nine) as the chairman brushed aside her father's short speech with a few terse sentences (i.e., "sorry to see you go") and started joking about who would take over. She looked so hurt and confused. Adults were used to having their feelings stomped on but the insensitive actions of this group temporarily crushed the spirit of a little child.

I don't know the open politics or hidden agendas of any of these commissioners on Southport development or the Cheaper Store. I don't know whether they like or dislike Mr. Cahill. To tell the truth, I don't even care. Whatever their positions on any given issue -- these people should have the common decency to treat a painful situation with some modicum of good manners. I hope a few of the commissioners (some City staff included), sat in their easy chairs in front of the T.V., and viewed the incident as it translated to outsiders. It was not a pretty picture.

Watching over elders

In the spirit of Elder Abuse Prevention and Awareness Week (May 8-12), perhaps it is time to develop a standard form for different levels of government entitled, "Problem(s) and Solution(s) thereto." Such a form (enclosed with monthly utility billings, etc.) would not only alert our citizenry that our City is interested in constituent participation, but could also provide the tool to encourage earlier intervention and less damage therefrom.

Of course such a problem/solution form would not tend to benefit only our elderly, but examples this writer thinks of now includes: (1) If we want to encourage more of our elderly to give up their cars for public transit, we need more benches/shelters and broader service hours...older, weaker legs do lend oneself to long waits, especially when we factor in the grocery shopping, etc.; (2) The lack of a more definitive policy towards planting and maintaining trees on private property in our City: It seems ironic that a neighbor can trim the branches on the tree that trunks on his side, and trim only the branches toward his house, thus causing one's own tree to lean more an more toward his neighbor's house! Present lack of tools cause potential victims to live in fear of "When will that tree crush my house?" Especially during soil-soaking heavy rain seasons and especially so with older, taller -- more brittle -- trees. Why wait for serious damage to occur? Treat it like any other nuisance abatement: Warn the owner-occupant or the absentee-landlord and occupant and if proper action is not taken soon, City should have the problem corrected and bill those responsible accordingly. (Those who object to such action should perhaps be required to switch places with the neighbor their tree threatens...); (3) Public should be provided with a tentative list of symptoms and/or clues that tell us our Elders may be Abused. Apply the same rationale to others who may be subject to abuse. By better informing the public as to what kinds of abuse to look out for and encouraging public to report same, we should make substantial reductions in said abuses -- including letting the wrongdoers know that a better informed public will be a better informing public -- to the detriment of the abuser, we hope.

A salute to our elders.

Fight drug abuse

Sunday, May 14, is Mother's Day and this date also marks the beginning of Yolo County Campaign for Alcohol and Drug-free Pregnancy. As we honor the women in our lives who are mothers, the Yolo Collaborative for Healthy Children and Families and the Perinatal Substance Abuse Coalition are urging the residents of Yolo County to address important maternal health issues that are affecting our children and families' quality of life.

Drug and alcohol abuse has become our nation's number one health problem. In Yolo County according to a recent county-wide survey, parental substance abuse was identified has one of the main challenges facing families throughout the county. Parents, youth and even children identified the use and abuse of alcohol and drugs as the underlying cause of violence, neglect and juvenile delinquency in families.

We must continue to advocate for expanded treatment opportunities for alcoholic and drug dependent women, especially pregnant women and women with dependent children.

The Yolo Collaborative for Healthy Children and the Perinatal Substance Abuse Coalition invite you to join with us this Mother's Day in support of more effective prevention, education and treatment. Together, we hold the greatest promise for healthy mothers and healthy babies.

Divorce doesn't have to be a harrowing experience

RELATIONSHIPS

THE GOOD DIVORCE
Constance Ahrons, Ph.D.
HarperCollins. 293 pages.
In this groundbreaking work, the author presents the thesis that divorce in itself is not bad—it's the social stigma against divorce that damages people. Drawing on research and her own experience, Ahrons maintains that divorce, properly done, offers an opportunity for growth, and that emotional damage to children can be avoided if a positive attitude is adopted by divorcing parents.

NON-FICTION

THE I CHING
A New Translation
Kerson & Rosemary Huang
Workman 207 pages
In the 1960s the I Ching became a favorite text of the hippie generation as it turned away from convention. The book has a venerable history, however, having served for 4,000 years as an oracle and moral text for Taoist and later Confucian Chinese. This new translation is by Kerson Huang, an MIT physicist of Chinese descent who has used the book since childhood.

FICTION

WINGS
Danielle Steel.
Delacorte. 395 pages.
Set in the 1930s, with the world on the brink of war, Steel's story of female flying ace Cassie O'Malley is filled with action, adventure and romance. The daughter of a World War I pilot, Cassie grows up to be a flyer herself, and winds up challenging Amelia Earhart's records while dealing with all the fallout that comes with being a media darling. In the course of entering the record books Cassie must decide on her true destiny and pursue it.

TALTOS: Lives of the Mayfair Witches
Anne Rice
Knopf. 465 pages.
Rice picks up the legend of the Mayfair witches that began with The Witching Hour and Lasher. At the heart of the novel is the Talamasca, a secular order of psychic scholars. The tale traces the origins of the Taltos, a clan of witches, from their origins in ancient Scotland to modern-day New Orleans. Not an upbeat tale, but one sure to please Rice fans.

Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on May 23, 1995 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 4 located at 725 Court Street, Woodland, California.
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. the time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Sulpizio expressed frustration that the state would allow the solution to be applied to the ground elsewhere, but not on port property. "We generated this material, and wanted to apply it to our own land. We've identified some areas where it could be very safely applied."

The port has been struggling with the disposal problem for a couple of years. In the past, when the equipment was washed, the ammonia was allowed to remain on the ground, according to Sulpizio.

One of the possible options port staff is exploring is to let the city's sewage treatment handle the ammonia.

The city has not granted permission, but city staff has told the port that West Sacramento's sewage treatment plant can handle the addition of the chemical to its waste water stream, according to Sulpizio.

"We've banked this land on behalf of the public for so long now, to sell it at a deep discount for a short term financial need would be impatient and imprudent," he said.

He went on to explain that deepening the channel would immediately raise the land's value, and that selling the land in order to deepen the channel would be to give away the rising value.

Much of the port's land is in the area of Southport zoned for industrial development.

If the Industrial Blvd bridge is completed, the added access to Southport is expected to add to the value of the port land.

dependent national panel composed of researchers and educators evaluated their effectiveness in raising student achievement levels.

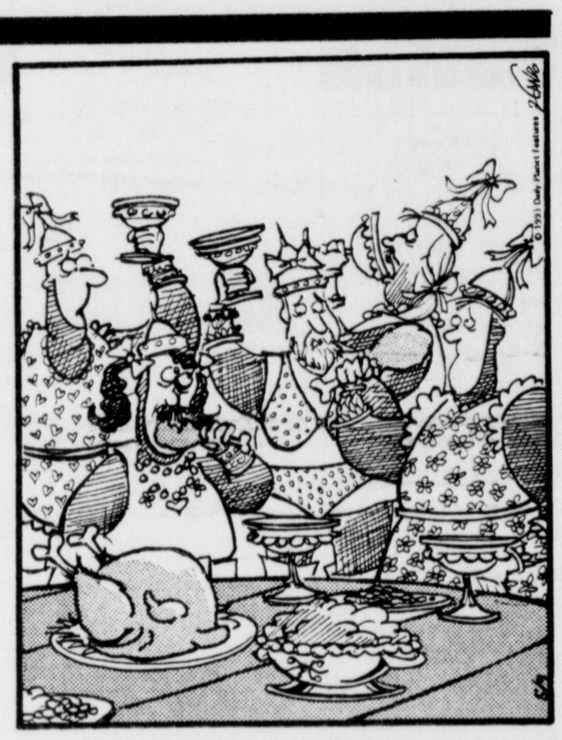

Test scores, grade promotions and courses completed, student self-assessment, teacher and parent ratings, as well as discipline and attendance, were reviewed to measure gains.

The 52 winners were selected from among 138 submissions from 47 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Awards were presented May 2 in Anaheim, California, at a ceremony to be held during the annual meeting of the International Reading Association. A sourcebook describing the winning projects will be published later this year.
